8th Montana Folk Festival July 13-15 in Butte

The Montana Folk Festival returns to Butte July 13-15 with continuous music on multiple stages by some of the best traditional artists in the nation, ethnic and festival foods, a family area and folklife area focused on Montana's heritage.

This year's theme is, "Digging Montana's Buried Beauty: How Gems and Minerals Have Made the Treasure State Shine."

The event kicks off with opening ceremonies on Friday, July 13 at 6:15 p.m. with a New Orleans brass band parade to the Original Mine Yard Stage, where a welcome ceremony will be held at 6:45 p.m. Traditional music will follow at that venue starting at 7 p.m. as well as at the Seacast Copper Street Stage and the Dance Pavilion on east Granite Street. Starting Saturday, all six stages will feature continuous entertainment throughout the weekend.

The first Montana Folk Festival was held in Butte in 2011, following the three previous years when Butte hosted the National Folk Festival. From the start, Montana organizers had the goal of developing a traditional festival to continue the excitement generated by the National events. With the resources and knowledge gained from those first three years, the Montana Folk Festival has continued to entertain and amaze visitors and locals alike with the variety and quality of its annual offerings.

The festival brings hundreds of thousands of visitors to Butte from all over Montana, the United States and around the world each year, bringing substantial economic benefit to communities throughout southwest Montana.

More than 250 traditional musicians, dancers and craftspeople will be coming to Butte for the three-day event. Some of the musical genres represented include Zydeco, Blues, Western Swing, Gospel and Bluegrass as well as a multitude of ethnic traditions such as Klezmer, Scottish, Egyptian, Spanish, Irish, Dominican, Greek, Columbian and Native American.

Visitors of all ages will thrill at the variety of performances throughout the weekend.

As in years past, admission to the Montana Folk Festival is free, thanks to the generosity of the festival's many sponsors. Volunteers will be manning a donation bucket-brigade for attendees who would like to contribute to make future festivals possible.

For visitors, three city parks will be available for tent camping on a first come, first served basis. Limited camping will be available at McGruff Park, Stodden Park, and Foreman's Park at the Mountain Con.

Visitors from out of town, those with disabilities and seniors are encouraged to park at the Butte Civic Center, where frequent shuttle busses will run to the festival and back again. Local traffic can take advantage of the new parking garage on Park Street as well as parking lots throughout uptown Butte. Festival shuttles will be available onsite for free transportation from venue to venue. Once again, there will be golf carts designated to transport senior citizens and those with disabilities or health concerns throughout the festival area.

Organizers remind the public that no pets are allowed at the festival site. Smoking is not allowed in the audience or near the performance or audience areas.

In 1988, the Butte Civic Center was the site of a hero's welcoming.

A large crowd turned out as Butte Olympian Dave Silk returned home from the Winter Games in Calgary. The crowd waited and waited until, finally, the big garage door opened on the east end of the building.

A firetruck came through the door, and it drove Silk, an alternate on the U.S. Olympic Speedskating team in 1984 and a competitor in 1988, around the arena for a victory lap.

Butte had a bona fide hero and a role model in Silk, and old and young alike showed up to get a good look at him.

From a young age, Dave clearly had the talent to be a great skater, back when speedskating was a huge deal in the Mining City, too. His work ethic made him world class.

Dream Big Event packed full of heroes, role models

I could not tell you for sure if anybody spoke that night. I just remember that we were all excited to see Silk in person once again after watching him compete on television.

Thirty years later, the Civic Center was again the scene of a hero's welcome. This time, though, we had a collection of hometown heroes under the same roof.

Three Butte legends – Colt Anderson, Tim Montana and Rob O'Neill – were all in the house at the same time. Anderson and Montana graduated from Butte High, while O'Neill is a Butte Central grad.

Anderson, the nine-year NFL veteran, brought the other two – among others – to town for the Dream Big Montana Event.

Not only did the youth of Butte – and many from out of town – get to see these extraordinary gentlemen, they got to interact with them. They got to see that they are regular guys who did incredible things because of their dedication.

A town full of young boys and girls in need of a good role model, got autographs and motivational messages from a host of inspirational characters who are known around the nation.

Montana is the former Tim Pasquino. He grew up in a trailer without electricity, so he had to learn how to play his guitar by candlelight.

Now, Montana hangs with the likes Kid Rock and ZZ Top's Billy Gibbons. He also writes and records with those men.

To cap the event on Friday night, Montana played a cold concert at the Original Mine Yard. The crowd was small, but Tim and his band put on a show like they were playing in a sold-out Madison Square Garden.

O'Neill is a best-selling author and motivational speaker. He, of course, is known for being part of the Navy SEAL Team Six raid that took out terrorist mastermind Osama bin Laden in 2011.

O'Neil fired the shots to kill America's biggest villain since Adolf Hitler.

Jaison Carriger would have been an NFL player if he wasn't injured in college. He played at Utah State and the University of Montana following his stellar career at Butte High. He himself is kind of a big deal who helped out with the football skills camp.

At the Tim Montana concert, Carriger got to meet and talk to O'Neill for the first time. You would have thought Carriger just shook hands with Mickey Mantle. Rob gets that every day.

When signing autographs on the book of cards handed out to all the boys and girls, O'Neill sent the youth with a message.

"Never quit," he wrote on each card.

That is a motto also followed by Anderson, who went from walk-on player to All-American at the University of Montana. After going undrafted in April 2009, the former Butte High Bulldog played nine seasons for the Vikings, Eagles, Colts and Bills.

Right now, he is a man without a team, but he is still delivering for the kids in Butte and beyond.

Anderson is the man responsible for bringing O'Neill and Montana to town last weekend. He and his wife, Keelie, started the Colt Anderson Dream Big Foundation recently, and last week's event shows that the non-profit organization is more than just paying lip service.

The three-day event included a gala, a skills camp for kids, a family fun day at the Civic Center and a concert by one of the best performers you will ever see live.

Former Montana Grizzly and St. Louis/Los Angeles Ram Chase Reynolds, a legend from down the road in Drummond, was there along former Grizzly and current San Francisco 49er Brock Coyle.

NFL offensive linemen Conor McDermott of the Bills and Ryan Jensen of the Buccaneers were also there. So was Maggie Voisin, an Olympic skier from Whitefish.

Jensen recently left the Ravens to sign a four-year $42-million deal with the Bucs. Of that, $22 million is guaranteed.

Still, Jensen blended in like just one of the guys – although he was much bigger than everyone but McDermott – at all the events.

That was part of the deal. Anderson wanted the boys and girls to see that NFL players, country music stars and Olympians are just regular men and women.

He wanted to show the kids that they, too, can dream big to become whatever they want. That is a great message to send to the kids because too many of them feel they were born behind the 8 ball.

Sure, Jensen is 6-foot-4 and 320 pounds. He was born with a bunch a natural talent and size, and most kids will never come close to playing center at the level Jensen does.

Anderson is different story. He is not nearly as big and fast as the NFL would like to see out of a safety and special teams player. He got by so long on hard work and dedication.

O'Neill hardly knew how to swim when he signed up for the Navy after a girl broke his heart.

Dedication and a desire to never quit sent him to Osama bin Laden's bed room, one of many legendary missions O'Neill took part in.

Montana was born with next to nothing. He dedicated himself to an instrument that any boy or girl can learn how to play, and that is leading him to some really big things.

Thrown in motorcross star Keith Sayers, who was featured at the gala, former Major League Baseball player Rob Johnson, who was not the best player on his American Legion team, Olympians Brad and Bryon Wilson, and former All-Big Sky player Lexie Nelson, and Butte is full of hardworking role models for our youth to look up to.

They are not just sports role models. They are life role models.

Anderson wants to make sure kids are paying attention to these people, and hundreds of kids clearly did.

If your son our daughter missed the event, don't worry.

The Dream Big Montana Event was the first of many things the Andersons have planned. Whether he plays another down of football or not, Colt Anderson is going to make sure our kids have role models to give them hope for their big dreams.

He will make sure bona fide hero sightings are a common occurrence.

What’s Cooking

Potato Salad

By Debbie Sorensen

What better time to bring on the salads than a Fourth of July picnic!

I’m bringing back a recipe that I’ve had many requests for over time. This is a way to involve other family members in the meal process before the parade, if you want to. That way, you can enjoy celebrating with the community and then settle in for an afternoon of fun, games, food and of course fireworks!

Have a blessed and safe July Fourth holiday, celebrating the best of America.

Potato Salad

- 4 lbs. potatoes (we like red)
  - ½ c. mayonnaise
  - 1 tsp. sea salt
  - 2 tsp. Dijon mustard
  - ¼ c. fresh chopped parsley
- ½ c. finely chopped onion
  - ½ c. sweet relish
  - ½ tsp. freshly ground pepper
  - 4 hard cooked eggs, coarsely chopped
  - ½ c. celery, thinned sliced

Peel potatoes, cut into large pieces, place in sauce pan and just cover with cold water. Cover and bring to boil. Cook until just tender. Drain, cool and chop into bite sized pieces. (If you choose, save the potato water for making bread. It produces great results.)

To prepared potatoes, add above ingredients. Adjust any seasonings as you desire. Add additional sliced eggs, grated carrots, thinly slice radishes, paprika, etc. as garnishes.

When I am asked why this recipe is “different,” I use a homemade zucchini relish that seems to add that something special.

Search is on for Public Works Director

By Robin Jordan

Late last week, Butte-Silver Bow posted the job notice for the Public Works Director position vacated by Dave Schultz June 8.

According to the notice on the county website, the deadline for applications is Friday, July 13. If the county receives enough applications from qualified candidates, a hiring committee will have to interview the candidates and make its recommendation to the council of commissioners, which has final say over hiring. The process will take some time, especially for such a crucial position, and it appears plans to appoint an interim director have been abandoned.

The timing of this vacancy couldn't have been worse; we're in the height of the construction season and Butte-Silver Bow has a full slate of projects underway. It's also budget season, when commissioners have to weigh the requests of all local government departments, which means that department heads have to be on deck to explain requests and make adjustments as the process goes forward.

As we've said before, this will be a difficult position to fill. The requirements are pretty stringent. According to the job posting, applicants must have a Bachelor's Degree in Civil Engineering or Public Works Administration, be registered as a Professional Engineer with the State of Montana or be able to obtain registration within a year, and have extensive public works administration experience, including at least 5 years of management experience, preferably with a city-county government or "any equivalent combination of experience and training which provides the knowledge, skills and abilities required to perform the work."

The salary is good, $75,773-$87,778 annually, according to the job posting, well within the average pay for the position nationwide. Still, we have to find a qualified candidate who either lives in Butte or is willing to relocate here who has the knowledge and skill to deal with Superfund issues in the community and help make crucial decisions as negotiations proceed toward a Consent Decree for the Butte Priority Soils Operable Unit.

It's a tough job, but the position could be a real career builder for the right candidate. The Public Works Director is responsible for roads, maintenance, water, sewer, parks and recreation, cemetery, landfill and transit divisions. He or she has to deal with complex budget issues, safety and public health regulations, major construction projects and more. Plus, he or she has to deal with other government departments and with the public, including handling public complaints.

The new Public Works Director will certainly have to hit the ground running—it's going to be a busy summer and fall in Butte. There won't be a lot of time for on-the-job training.

We're glad the city-county has finally advertised the job. We wish it would have commenced its search more quickly.

The Political Use of Family Separation

By George Waring

I just listened to a TV interview with a ranch-owning loyal Trump supporter in south Texas being interviewed regarding the administration's policy of separating immigrant families. When the reporter raised the idea that conditions in the refugees' homelands of Guatemala, El Salvador and Honduras were currently accelerating the desire among the region's parents to risk their lives on the dangerous trek to the United States, the rancher was dismissive. Regardless of conditions anywhere, for that rancher, Trump was simply enforcing federal law. As President, he was fulfilling his constitutional duty. Yes, it was sad that infants were crying and traumatized, but Trump had nothing to do with a suffering caused by Latino parents.

It would be difficult to convince that solid White Nationalist Republican that President Ronald Reagan's and George H. W. Bush's covert CIA-led anti-communist wars against the Contras in Nicaragua had anything to do with the deteriorating social conditions that now exist in the small nations south of Mexico.

As I wrote in the fall of last year, I had the opportunity to read Noam Chomsky's reporting from Nicaragua and its neighbors during the administration of George W. Bush. I rediscovered this nation's secret Central American foreign policy, a policy opposed by the leading believers in democracy in that region. At that time, New York Times reporters were simply passing along State Department handouts about the CIA-equipped anti-Sandinista Contras being defenders of democracy.

Today the President is using the long-term consequences of U.S. destruction of infant democracies in Latin America to rally his Republican based "Cult of Personality Fascist Party." He is confident that he is on solid White Nationalist electoral ground. He is back in campaign mode, seeing himself once more performing before cheering crowds chanting "Build the Wall, Build the Wall."

According to the Labor Editor at Daily Kos, Laura Clawson, what has occurred at the White House since the horrific child separation from parents at the border began to be publicized, is a radical change in electoral policy. She reported on June 19th that Republicans had been planning to focus their re-election campaigns on the benefits of the celebrated pro-corporate tax reform of 2017. However, their polling groups agreed that the tax law was not as popular as they had believed in March.

Lawson reported that pollsters were finding that even Republicans were not "strongly mobilized to vote by the tax law." That bad news allowed Trump "to pivot back to the horse he came in on—racism and hatred, directed at immigrants in particular." Thus, Trump's public appearance on June 18th saw him return to immigrant bashing, as he deplored "the death, the destruction that's been caused by people coming into this country." He insisted both that "We have the worst immigration laws in the entire world," and that he was protecting the U.S. from "what's happening in Europe." And what's happening in Europe was "accepting refugees fleeing for their lives."

Thus, if Lawson is correct, came the unveiling of the new Republican re-election strategy. She quotes Trump political advisor Corey Lewandowski:

"People don't turn out to say thank you. If you want to get people motivated, you've got to give them a reason to vote. Saying 'build the wall and stop illegals from coming in and killing American citizens' gives them an important issue."

As Lawson eloquently writes, "The Republican's new 'reason to vote' is fearing brown people so much you think it's a good thing to tear children from their parents' arms." She quotes another Trump adviser, who did not want to be named, as saying: "It's the reality of where the party is."

I finish today with reference to my last column in June. The quotes come from an article published on the History News Network by Richard E. Frankel, a Professor of Modern German History at the University of Louisiana at Lafayette.

Frankel describes the scene at the border as "part of a deliberate policy implemented by Trump, Sessions, and Stephen Miller in their ongoing effort to re-build a white, Christian America through the exclusion (in this case through terror) of all those they deem to be outsiders."

After his short account of Hitler's "Final Solution," Frankel asks: "What does it mean, then, for a society to sink so low as to permit the forced separation of families whose only 'crime' is seeking peace and freedom in America?"

Our answer?

MAKING SENSE OF INVESTING

Debbie McLarnon

Questions to Ask Your Financial Advisor

You should always be able to ask as many questions as you'd like when working with your financial advisor. So, before you have your annual review, think carefully about what you'd like to ask. Here are a few suggestions:

Are my goals still realistic? When you first began working with your financial advisor, you may well have articulated a number of financial goals. For example, you might have said that you wanted to pay for most of your children's college educations, or that you wanted to retire at a certain age, or that you wanted to travel for two months each year during your retirement. In fact, you could have many different goals for which you're saving and investing. When you meet with your financial advisor, you'll certainly want to ask if you're still on track toward meeting these goals. If you are, you can continue with the financial strategies you've been following; but if you aren't, you may need to adjust them.

Am I taking on too much – or too little – risk? The financial markets always fluctuate, and these movements will affect the value of your investment portfolio. If you watch the markets closely every day and track their impact on your investments, you may find yourself fretting considerably over your investments' value and wondering if you are taking on too much investment risk for your comfort level. Conversely, if you think that during an extended period of market gains your own portfolio appears to be lagging, you might feel that you should be investing more aggressively, which entails greater risk. In any case, it's important that you know your own risk tolerance and use it as a guideline for making investment choices – so it's definitely an issue to discuss with your financial advisor.

How will changes in my life affect my investment strategy? Your life is not static. Over time, you may experience any number of major events, such as marriage, children, new jobs and so on. When you meet with your financial advisor, you will want to discuss these types of changes, because they can affect your long-term goals and, consequently, your investment decisions.

How are external forces affecting my investment portfolio? Generally speaking, you will want to create an investment strategy that's based on your goals, risk tolerance and time horizon. And, as mentioned above, you may need to adjust your strategy based on changes in your life. But should you also make changes based on outside forces, such as interest rate movements, political events, new legislation or news affecting industries in which you have invested substantially? Try not to make long-term investment decisions based on short-term news. Yet, talk with your financial advisor to make sure your investment portfolio is not out of alignment with relevant external factors.

By making these and other inquiries, you can help yourself stay informed on your overall investment picture and what moves, if any, you should make to keep advancing toward your goals. A financial advisor is there to provide you with valuable expertise – so take full advantage of it.

Why do Yoga?

Yoga is an ancient art that continues to be popular, with new types of classes being offered all the time. Classes can be gentle and accommodating or strenuous and challenging, depending on preference and physical ability. Why does Yoga continue to be popular and why should we practice?

Many exercisers stretch; often after running, cycling, or an exercise class. That type of stretching tends to be for a short period, if at all. If you are not stretching within a Yoga class, which can be an hour or more, it is hard to think of stretching for longer than five or ten minutes. In this way, Yoga is stretching and beyond.

Although I do Yoga two or three times each week, I am still not as flexible as I want to be. I wonder how much stiffer I would be if I never did Yoga. There are so many Yoga poses and flows that move our bodies into positions that are not part of our everyday lives. Especially as we age, if we do not put ourselves in those positions, we will just become less flexible.

Strictly from the point of view of healthy aging, Yoga can be an essential component. During the typical Yoga class, the spine is stretched in every direction. If the spine isn't moved in all directions on a regular basis, it will have less and less range of motion, which ultimately leads to a high risk of injury. Flexibility in not only the spine but hips, shoulders and other joints, reduces the risk of injury, even with a fall.

Balance is something else we lose when we do not work on it. Balance helps with joint stability and reduces the risk of falling and therefore the risk of fracture. Balance is also important in activities of daily living and helps to keep us more functional.

Yoga helps us to balance our lives since it is also a time of relaxation and letting go.

One way that Yoga improves our physical wellbeing that stretching alone does not is with strength.

Yoga poses and flows are designed to increase strength endurance as well as flexibility. Weight training increases overall strength but does not improve strength endurance as Yoga does. This is also important to staying functional in daily activities.

Researchers have discovered that while most Yoga participants begin practicing Yoga for the flexibility and balance, most also experience a reduction in stress. Tension in our muscles is a byproduct of stress and is manifested as physical tension. Yoga targets the areas that are holding the most tension. When the tension is released, we feel lighter, freer and less stressed.

Recent research illustrated that Yoga can work well with physical therapy, aiding in recovery from many injuries and in relieving back pain. A Harvard University study also found that Yoga can improve anxiety and depression. Like other self-soothing techniques, such as meditation, relaxation, exercise, or even socializing with friends, Yoga can lower the heart rate, blood pressure and ease respiration rate, results that are all beneficial to overall health.

If you already do Yoga, you know all of this and more. If you have tried it in the past, give it another shot. Consider finding a class more suited for your needs. You can begin a Yoga practice at home with a recording or television programming, in a class or on your own if you are already familiar. It is a process, and no one is expected to get the poses perfect right away, or ever. The rewards are in the process. Stretch, relax and enjoy!

Bladder Infections

Health quiz: after the respiratory tract, what part of our bodies has the most common infection? If you guessed urinary tract, you're either super smart or have suffered from repeated bladder infections or even worse, kidney infections. According to researchers, 34 per cent of adults over the age of 20 say they have experienced at least one urinary tract infection.

For some sufferers, urinary tract infections (UTIs) can recur all too frequently. Nearly 20 per cent of women who have a UTI will have another and 30 per cent of those will have even more. In the US, 9.6 million doctor visits are attributed to UTIs each year. What's up with this statistic?

The kidneys, that lie on either side of the spine at about waist level, remove excess liquid and wastes from the blood through urine. They keep a balance of salts and other substances in the blood and produce a hormone that aids in the formation of red blood cells.

By design, the urinary system naturally helps ward off infection. The ureters (the narrow tubes that carry urine from the kidneys to the bladder) and bladder normally prevent urine from backing up toward the kidneys and the flow of urine from the bladder helps wash bacteria out of the body. In men, the prostate gland produces secretions that slow bacterial growth. In both men and women, the immune system also fights off infections, but nevertheless, infection can occur.

Urine is normally sterile, but when organisms, typically bacteria, enter the urethra and travel into the bladder or kidneys, infection sets in. The most common type of UTI is a bladder infection, also called cystitis. These infections are rarely serious and easily treated, but if a bladder infection is ignored, bacteria can travel higher up into the ureters and infect the kidneys. If you think bladder infections hurt, sting and make life miserable, try the pain of a kidney infection! Usually, the farther up in the urinary tract the infection is located, the more serious it is. UTIs are more common in adults than children, but they can be quite serious in children and senior adults.

More than 90 per cent of UTIs are caused by the bacteria E. coli, which is present in the colon and anal area. When these bacteria get into the urinary tract, either by not urinating frequently, or a number of other reasons, they attach themselves to the mucous lining of the urethra and bladder. Here they multiply and create an infection.

Symptoms include the need to urinate without being able to do so adequately. There is often pain and burning when you do urinate, and the urine may smell bad. Children may not be able to articulate their discomfort, but signs include irritability, vomiting, diarrhea, lack of appetite, and fever. The elderly may also have fever, lack of appetite and confusion that may degenerate into disorientation. In the elderly, kidney damage and failure can be life-threatening.

Allopathic remedies include antibiotics once an infection has been diagnosed, but there are natural approaches that can be effective. Most sufferers reach for unsweetened cranberry juice, but cranberry extract in pill form, or combined with the sugar found in cranberries, d-Mannose, can often eradicate an infection.

D-mannose inhibits adherence of E.coli in the urinary tract. While it used to be thought that cranberries acted as antibiotics, in 1984 and 1991 research showed that it was the anti-adherence capabilities that significantly reduced the presence of bacteria in the urine. Researchers identified the active compounds in cranberry responsible for this effect as tannins, or Proanthocyanidins (PACs). In 1998 a study found that anthocyanidins in blueberries worked similarly to prevent UTIs.

Cranberry became internationally famous in 2004 when France approved cranberry juice as an antibacterial agent for urinary tract health, and Canada has also allowed medicinal claims for cranberry.

While cranberry has been the star in urinary health, probiotics, either by themselves or in combination with cranberry in pill form, can combat, prevent and reduce the frequency of UTIs overall. Additionally, if you are plagued by repeated UTIs, examine your diet and make sure it is low in sugar, alcohol, and caffeine and rich with greens, good water, and whole, unprocessed foods. Stay well naturally with cranberry for urinary health.

Carousel Corner

By Larry Hoffman

It's close folks!

Those of you who stopped in at the two open houses got to see just how close, and were even able to buy Jim Goebel's coloring book and "Goodnight Butte" from the gift shop, now essentially complete.

There are still a lot of details to finish before our Carousel can twirl the ponies, but we've had a good volunteer turnout to work on them. Mike Sawicki also has a staff of four part-time workers learning about the place as they help get things ready for full-time work.

The plan for ADA access had to be changed at the last minute, but Mason Masters came in and worked his magic. The carousel itself has all the horses and chariots on-board and work is continuing on the decorative panels and lights.

Artistically the place is blossoming, with the Giving Tree leafed out with one for every donor on our records. There are a lot of leaves. Marilyn Mason is working on large surround murals, and other artistic ladies, along with Jim, are detailing everywhere. Photographs fill formerly blank walls. Sonya Rosenthal and her crew of seamstresses are working on the colorful canopy that will flare out over the horses and riders. The fence around the carousel is about 40% complete.

The concession area fixtures are almost all in place and wired. We are scheduled to have telephone and internet service this week, which will complete our move from the Butte Plaza Mall and allow us to resume real contact with the world.

Almost every bit of work involves a major or minor mess that needs constant cleaning and recleaning.

We are still scratching our heads to figure out a way to muffle the band organ, which is VERY LOUD and would drive anyone inside the building crazy as it is now.

Watch for the Columbia Gardens fire truck in the Fourth of July parade, and feel free to give money to the volunteers with it!

Contributions to the project may be made by PayPal from our Facebook page, www.facebook.com/pages/Spirit-of-Columbia-Gardens-Carousel, or the website, <http://www.buttecarousel.com/>, by mail to P.O. Box 782, Butte, 59703. We are a 501(c) 3 non-profit that also may qualify for employer matching donations.

If you have any comments or suggestions, or would like to volunteer to help, please let us know! Call the office at 494-7775, or stop by the site. We are not there all the time, but as much as we can!

The Great Outdoors

Founding Fathers’ words still true today

By Paul Vang

Today, on this fourth day of July, we celebrate the 242nd anniversary of the founding of our Republic. Historians will remind us that it’s July 2 that we should observe as Independence Day. It was on that day, in 1776, the Continental Congress voted to declare independence from Great Britain. Of course, the Declaration of Independence, primarily written by Thomas Jefferson, John Adams, and Benjamin Franklin, bears the date of July 4, and thus this is the day we observe as the founding of our nation.
John Adams famously wrote (keeping in mind he was referring to July 2), “It ought to be solemnized with pomp and parades, with shows, games, sports, guns, bells, bonfires, and illuminations, from one end of this continent to the other from this time forward forever more.”
Appropriately, right here in Butte, Montana, we have one of the best celebrations of Independence Day.
This, of course, is a highly subjective judgment and I’ll confess that I may not be qualified to make this assessment. On the other hand, in this nation, and at this time in our nation’s history, lack of knowledge or expertise doesn’t seem to disqualify anyone from making judgments and expressing opinions.

Nevertheless, we celebrate with parades and illuminations, and one way or another, Butte celebrates the day much as John Adams had in mind all those years ago in those heady days of 1776 when those upstarts in a rebellious Congress dared to thumb their noses at King George III.
The struggle for independence was a near thing, as the incompetence of volunteer militia again and again proved it was no match for the trained army of the world’s greatest power. On the other hand, the struggle also proved something even modern armies have learned, that rebellious forces can, eventually, wear down the will and resources of even a mighty power that has to maintain supply lines that cross great oceans.
So, what would presidents Adams and Jefferson, who drafted the Declaration of Independence, and following a long period of estrangement, reconciled through a long series of letters, and dying on the same day, on the 50th anniversary of the Declaration, say about this Republic they launched?

Perhaps, if Jefferson were to take a long look at today’s divisive and impetuous leadership, he might refer back to a letter he wrote in 1797. “A little patience, and we shall see the reign of witches pass over, their spells dissolve, and the people, recovering their true sight, return their government to its true principles.”
John Adams feared for those who would get too powerful.
“Power,” he wrote, “must never be trusted without a check.” Another statement might resonate during our modern times, “Power always thinks it has a great soul and vast views beyond the comprehension of the weak, and that it is doing God’s service when it is violating all his laws.” On another occasion he wrote, “There is danger from all men. The only maxim of a free government ought to be to trust no man living with power to endanger the public liberty.”

On the subject of religious basis for what some might call evil acts, Jefferson wrote, “It is in our lives, and not from our words, that our religion must be read.” Of course, he added, “By the same test the world must judge me.” Thomas Jefferson was that massive bundle of contradictions, a person who wrote eloquently on the evils of slavery, for example, yet remained a slave-owner to his last days.
Regarding a President’s continuing assault on news and journalists, and factions that advocate we should ignore scientific fact, Jefferson wrote, “We are not afraid to follow truth, wherever it may lead, nor to tolerate any error so long as reason is left free to combat it.”
We might also remember something that Jefferson wrote near the end of his life, “The equal rights of man and the happiness of every individual, are now acknowledged to be the only legitimate objects of government.”
Revolutionary words for modern times.

AmeriCorps volunteers thank Butte for opportunity to serve

To the Community of Butte,

The AmeriCorps Energy Corps project is an initiative of the National Center for Appropriate Technology (NCAT) that was created to address unmet community energy needs by promoting sustainable energy consumption and education, fostering community sustainability, and helping to mitigate the effects of global climate change.

At the end of May, Energy Corps members from around the state travelled to Butte for their mid-service training to prepare them for life after service and to participate in a day-long community service project. Post-service lessons included presentations on strengthening resumes, interview preparation, and training in grant writing taught by Butte's own Janet Cornish, a longtime consultant and community planner.

On May 30th the 20-member team divided up Butte's nine volunteer fire departments and went to work performing life weatherization and retrofitting old bulbs in each station. Replacing 90% of the light bulbs with energy efficient lighting saved the departments and the city of Butte, a combined $3,500 annually on their energy bills, equaling the amount of carbon sequestered by 660 seedlings for ten years, or 30 acres of forest in one year. Five of the nine stations were able to be completely retrofitted.

The bulbs and bulb recycling kits were purchased through Platt Electric, work shirts embroidered at Embroidery Plus, and all tools and weatherization materials purchased at Triple S Building Center (shout out to Gerald!) in Butte.

Many thanks to Trademark Electric, Three Bears, Town Talk Bakery, Great Harvest, Broadway Café, and Homestake Lodge for making the community service project possible. And of course, thanks go out to all the volunteer department chiefs for collaborating with, and allowing, 20 eager volunteers to occupy their stations for a day. Thank you, Ted Bury at Big Butte, Ed Fisher at Boulevard, Kelly Sullivan at Centerville, Brian Cullen at Floral Park, Mike Whindom at Homer Atherton, Jim Ross at Little Basin Creek, Gary Mattern at Race Track, Tom Morrill at Rocker, and George Goody at Terra Verde.

You guys do amazing work! Thank you for your dedication and volunteerism.
Respectfully serving,

Shyla Wesely
