Montana Tech Techxpo showcases student design, research innovations

By Robin Jordan

Last week, Montana Tech students invited the public to "Listen. Inquire. Learn." at the 7th annual "Techxpo" competition at the college's HPER complex.

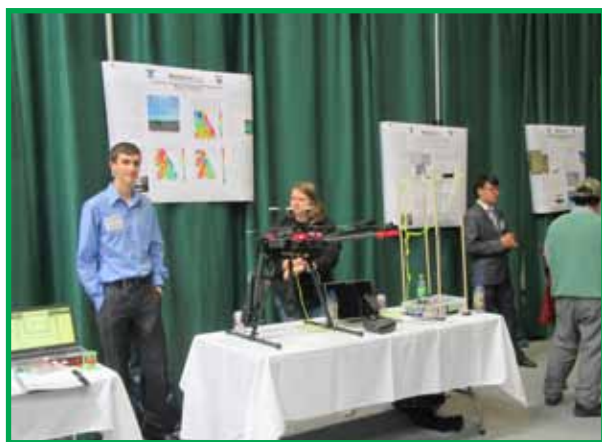

The competition, which is open to graduate and undergraduate students at Montana Tech and Highlands College, included more than 100 entries in a myriad of disciplines, from mining, mechanical, petroleum and general engineering to psychology, biology, math and computer science.

While the titles of some of the projects may have sounded daunting to the general public—"Quantification of Concentration of Microalgae Anabaena Cylindrica, Nannochloropsis Gaditana and Coal-bed Methane Water Isolates PW-95 in Aquatic Solutions through Hyperspectral Reflectance Measurement and Analytical Model Establishment" or "Developing Blended Polymers used in the Encapsulation and Delivery of Phage/Nanoparticles for Coaxial Electrospinning Systems"—the student researchers were eager and willing to explain their work in terms even the most technology-challenged could understand.

Many of the projects dealt with ecological challenges and phenomena in the Butte area, with students collecting samples and testing equipment or theories at a variety of local sites.

Students demonstrated their academic and technological skills at the 7th annual Montana Tech Techxpo competition last Thursday at the HPER complex. Shown are Joseph Natale and Sierra Luoma with a drone used to measure the earth's magnetic field, members of the Tech Baja SAE team with their competition vehicle and the Tech's entry for the upcoming NASA Robotic Mining Competition in May.

Student research projects included mapping contaminated groundwater, testing solar evaporation islands that could be used on the Berkeley Pit and a variety of studies to improve revegetation of old mining sites, including using a fungus to improve plant growth on polluted soils and developing trees tolerant of degraded soils in an underground greenhouse.

The event allows the public to see students and faculty demonstrate how they apply their knowledge to some of the world's most challenging problems.

Some of the more popular exhibits included the Baja SAE vehicle, which students will be taking to an annual international competition in Kansas in May, a mining robot designed for use on other planets, and various drones used for collecting data above and below ground.

Each degree area is judged separately by industry professionals at the Techxpo event and cash prizes are given for the first-place poster and first-place demonstration booth display in each discipline. The Best of Show winner also receives a cash prize.

While some students were presenting their projects for the first time at last week's event, many have been working on design or conducting research on their projects for several years, working with their professors and building on previous studies done by other students or professionals. A number of students talked about publishing their work and their hopes of obtaining funding to expand or continue their research.

Montana Tech started holding the annual Techxpo exhibition and competition in 2012 to showcase the research and design work of the school's students and faculty members.

The Butte Blizzard is a great name.

That is what the local high school lacrosse club changed its moniker to for this season, which is the club's fourth.

The name does pose a few problems for headline writers because it is hard to remember if Blizzard should be referred to as "it" or "them." It is still an awesome name.

The name is also fitting, since the first game the Butte played under the name was on a snow-packed Dahlberg Field at West Elementary School. The temperature at the start of the game was 18 degrees.

The game wasn't played in an actual blizzard, but it certainly in the aftermath of one. The Great Falls Fury also felt the effects of the Blizzard in more ways than one in that 6-4 loss.

The only other names that could be better for lacrosse players to compete under in the Mining City are the Butte High Bulldogs and the Butte Central Maroons.

The Blizzard are made up of players from Butte High, Butte Central and the Alternative School. Players from Anaconda are also under the jurisdiction of the Blizzard according to the Montana High School Lacrosse Association, though the team currently has no Copperheads.

You have to kind of like the idea of Butte and Anaconda players competing on the same side in a hard-hitting sport like lacrosse.

What would be even better, though, would be Butte playing against Anaconda.

Someday, that will definitely happen. The day is coming – though it could be many years away – when we will see lacrosse as a high school sanctioned sport in Montana. It's just a matter of time.

Lacrosse isn't the fastest growing sport in America. That distinction has belonged to soccer since 1937.

It is growing fast, though. The fact that lacrosse has reached Montana is proof of that.

When I was a kid, we had no idea what lacrosse even was. We just knew we never wanted to play a sport with a name like lacrosse. It seemed like if fell somewhere between badminton and tiddlywinks on the scale of manliness.

The first lacrosse game I ever watched was the one when Chris "Oz" Ostreicher left early to sing

BUTTE SPORTS

Only two names better for lacrosse than Blizzard

with Heather on "American Pie" in 1999.

As it turned out, we were really missing out by the lack of lacrosse. The sport sure looks like it is a blast to play.

Lacrosse is like a combination of sports. It is a little bit hockey, a little big basketball, a little bit soccer and, maybe, a little bit football.

Currently, the team plays at Dahlberg Field, where the growing crowd has no place to sit.

It would be cool to see the Blizzard host a few games at Bulldog Memorial Stadium or even Naranche Stadium. That way the team could host a tournament – maybe even the state tournament – and bring a ton of money into the local economy.

We have two of the best high school stadiums in town. The Blizzard playing lacrosse in one of them just might help justify that infrastructure expenditure.

It will be even cooler to see one of those stadiums full of fans when the sport is a sanctioned Montana High School Association sport.

The way the sport is growing, it is going to force such a move someday.

I know right now there are some local track coaches reading this and saying, "Hey, ixnay on the acrosselay."

After all, it is an uphill fight to get kids to go out for the sports we already have. So many would rather sit at home and play their PlayStation or Nintendo.

I'm sure Butte coaches were saying that about softball when the push was made to bring that sports to the high schools in the late 1980s. Then, Butte High went out and won a state title in its second year of existence, silencing the critics forever.

Look at all the Montana athletes who went on to play college soccer after football coaches objected to adding that sport.

The more opportunities for the high school athletes the better, and lots of colleges give scholarship money to lacrosse players.

If I was a football coach, I'd want my players to play lacrosse, too, if they weren't playing another spring sport. The same goes for basketball and baseball. The cross-over skills of lacrosse can help a players' development in so many sports.

Hunter Carroll decided go out for the first lacrosse team three years ago, when the sport was first introduced to the Butte boys. He says he wishes that he had the chance to do it four years ago because it would have made him a better football player.

Now 20, Carroll is the head coach of the Blizzard, and he'd like to see more boys jump at the opportunities the sports presents.

We already have a Butte guy in Nick Ossello playing in Major League Lacrosse for the Denver Outlaws.

OK, so Ossello technically is not from Butte. But his parents, Guy and Madeline Ossello, are. So are his grandparents and many, many cousins.

Nick grew up in Wheat Ridge, Colorado, where he starred in football and lacrosse. He went on to play lacrosse at Notre Dame and helped lead the Irish to the final four.

He also played a year of football for the Irish.

If his parents had stayed in Butte, Nick might not even have heard of lacrosse. Now he's playing in the big time.

Nick's younger sister Gianna was also a lacrosse star. She played for Duke, but we won't hold that against her today.

Wouldn't it be nice to see more Butte athletes get the opportunity the Ossello kids had?

The Blizzard roster currently stands at 14 or 15 players, and I know we can make that a lot bigger in the coming years. We can even make that better this year because the team will still accept new players, even though there are only two games left in the regular season.

Players of all shapes and sizes can play the sport, too.

Take your sons and daughters to the final two home games the next two Thursday nights at Dahlberg Field and let them see for themselves.

Right now, as much it is trying to win lacrosse games, the Blizzard are trying to help the sport grow. Recently they got a big boost from Bill Belichick. Yes, that one.

The New England Patriots coach took a break from blowing up planets from his Death Star to award the Blizzard a Bill Belichick Foundation Spring Lacrosse Equipment Grant.

That grant will give the Blizzard 25 player sets, which includes costly helmets, pads and sticks.

That will help keep the cost down for players wanting to try the sport next year. It will help make sure the Blizzard are here to stay for the long hall.

Well, they will be here at least until the Bulldogs and Maroons start playing lacrosse.

Long summer of chores ahead

By Robin Jordan

Now that May is here, I'm really going to miss the lazy days of April.

Sure, we had a few snow-storms that required me to get out the shovel and clear the heavy wet stuff from the sidewalks, but most of the month was a carefree one. Although the temperatures turned balmy on several days, leftover ice and snow made it impossible to do more than a little bit of lawn raking.

We were elated when the ice-rink in Mom's front yard finally melted enough so that we could get the extension cords out of the ice and put away the outdoor Christmas decorations. While that chore also entailed a half-day of cleaning out the garage to make room to store them, we were so glad to get them put away that we didn't care.

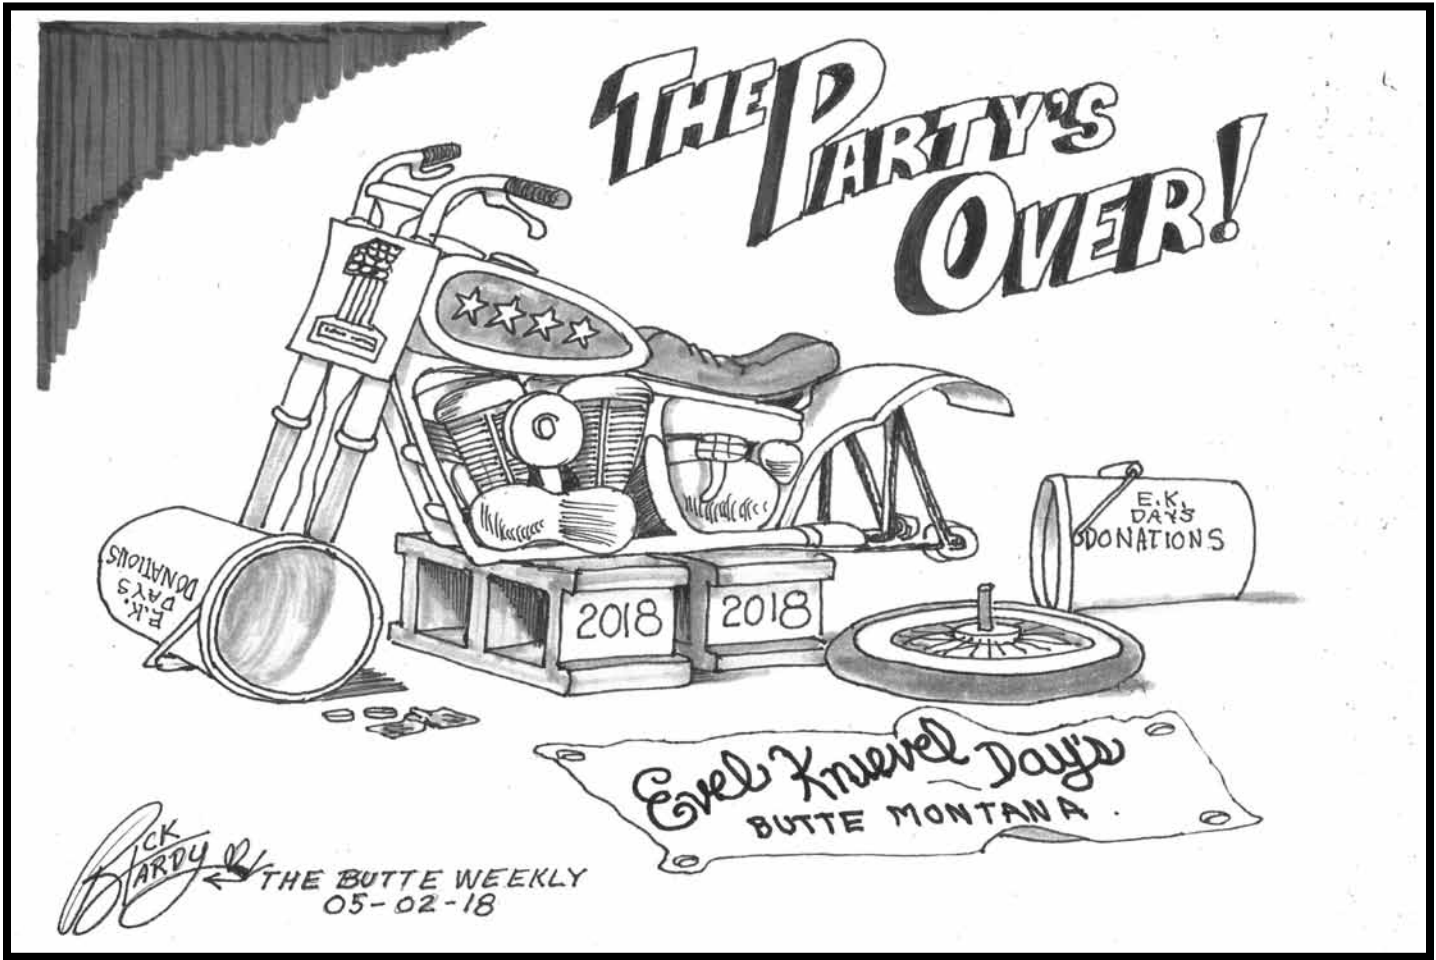

But now it's May and the good weather seems to be here to stay. Now, instead of talking about our summer projects, we actually have to start working on them.

Late last summer, my husband Dave and I started replacing the failing brick veneer on the lower half of the front of Mom's house with new brick-look panels. Between the difficulty of removing all the old brick material and mortar, this required us to cover the exposed wood with Tyvek and a special drainage matting before putting up the panels. We also had to scrape and paint all the windows. On October 31, we cleaned up the yard and put away all our tools and materials just in time for the first major snowstorm that came on November 1. Now, we have to finish the job, so it's back to cutting and fitting panels and putting them up.

Then, there's the garden. This week, we'll have to get out the roto-tiller, buy some fertilizer and start digging it up. I can't figure out when it found time to grow, but we already have plenty of clumps of tough grass creeping its way into the garden, so all of that has to be dug up and removed so that we can start planting vegetable and flower seeds.

Once we get the garden dug and seeds planted, the work will only be beginning. We'll have to start the daily tasks of watering and weeding and no doubt, we'll be heading for the Farmer's Market to get squash and tomato plants. We'll have weeks of worrying about the weather and checking on our plantings before we can finally enjoy eating fresh vegetables from the garden and seeing our flowers bloom.

Somewhere, between working on the house project and taking care of the garden, we have to find time to do more work on our '62 Chevy Impala. We replaced the dented front bumper last year, but we still have some trim to replace and the car will probably need some other work to get it ready for some summer cruising.

Looking forward to all the work we have to do is daunting, but it also sounds like a heck of a lot of fun. Guess we won't miss the lazy, grey days of April much after all.

Mulvaney Welcomes Scoff-laws

By George Waring

A few weeks ago I quoted a Kansas City Star article concerning Mick Mulvaney's February quashing of the CFPB suit alleging that four pay day lenders had "violated usury laws in seventeen states and thereby engaged in unfair, deceptive and abusive practices under federal law."

That newspaper's article stated that "the business model used by the four companies mirrored what's referred to as the 'rent-a-tribe' structure, where a payday lender nominally establishes its business on American Indian reservations, where state regulations generally do not apply."

That was news to me. I had been living under the delusion that our 2010 successful Montana Initiative 164 that set the maximum rate for pay day loans at 36% had ended the ability of Wall Street billionaires to prey upon this state's citizens. That was day dreaming in this land of financial oligarchs.

That business model of "rent-a-tribe" simply opened a whole new avenue for another criminal conspiracy by our oligarchs. And this business model was even worse than the 650% a year rate that the Montana legislature of 2005 had imposed on borrowers in need. According to the Consumer Finance Protection Bureau, in its Kansas City federal law suit, the top rate being charged a pay day loan was 950%.

This "rent-a-tribe" business model has been the subject of good investigative reporting. In June of 2015, Ben Walsh, the Business Reporter for the Huffington Post, published lengthy piece detailing how California financial entrepreneur Ken Rees had made himself a multi-millionaire by being a Bill Clinton era pioneer in online lending with his company, Think Cash. He had figured out in the 1990's how state loan regulations could be avoided by passing his loans through a nationally chartered bank. His model was called the "rent-a-bank" model. However, during the first years of the Obama administration, when the finance industry was weakened politically, federal regulators ended his loophole.

Then, according to Walsh, Rees hit upon working his scam through Native American tribes. The tribes are exempt from state regulations. Rees renamed his company "Think Finance." In 2011 he convinced the 6,000 member Chippewa Cree Tribe of northern Montana to enter into a proposed joint lending venture with his outfit. Rees would provide all the capital in this joint venture. Rees would build the partnership a state of the art call center. The tribe would own 51 percent of the company, and Rees and his California backers would own 49 percent. Under the new name of "Plain Green," the Cree tribe made about $30 million in four years, out of between $500 million and $700 million earned by Rees and his California billionaires. Rees brought in Silicon Valley money, from investors associated with such firms as Oracle, Cisco, Yahoo and Google.

Walsh writes that Plain Green was making loans all over the country in mid-2015. Within a couple of years, "the loans ended up owned by a Cayman Islands servicing company. And Plain Green, citing the Chippewa Cree's sovereignty in its lending agreement with customers, could guarantee that state and federal regulators would have no legal standing to interfere."

As of mid-2015, Walsh maintained that "a quarter of the $4.1 billion the online payday loan industry was taking in each year was going to 30 or so of these partnership lenders based on reservations." Note: this billion or more per year was going to the partnerships based legally on reservations, but not to the tribes themselves. More than 90% of the profits made under the "rent-a-tribe" business model went to the financial backers of these schemes. These folks knew how to hide their profits from taxation in the Caymans.

In further researching this subject, I happened on a February 22nd New York Magazine article by Jonathan Chait entitled "The Trump Administration Is a Golden Age for Corporate Crooks." Yes, Chait included mention of Mick Mulvaney's termination of the Consumer Finance Protection Bureau's suit against Golden Valley, a pay-day lender set up within a California reservation.

Here's Jonathan Chait's thesis. The Republicans have succeeded in directly transferring hundreds of billions of tax dollars to the richest one percent of the citizenry, with corporate CEOs using their windfall for stock buybacks, "a simple windfall for owners of capital." However, just as importantly, the Republicans, by weak enforcement of regulations, are conferring "a windfall targeted specifically at businesses that cheat their customers or break the law."

And that's the mission of Mick Mulvaney's Consumer Finance Protection Bureau.

Beaverhead-Deerlodge National Forest volunteers enhance visitor experiences

The Beaverhead-Deerlodge National Forest (BDNF) in southwest Montana is known for outstanding outdoor recreation opportunities. Spanning over 3.3 million acres, the forest has over 3,000 miles of trails, 4,700 miles of roads, 81 developed campgrounds and picnic sites, and 24 rental cabins.

Chances are your favorite trail, cabin or campground has had the hands of volunteers and partners taking care of it. “The Beaverhead-Deerlodge NF provides an incredible setting that strengthens our local communities economically and connects people to the outdoors through enhanced recreation opportunities and experiences,” said Forest Supervisor Melany Glossa.

“With declining budgets, it has become more difficult to manage and maintain infrastructure that is critical to providing a variety of safe and enjoyable recreational experiences,” Acting Deputy Forest Supervisor Scot Shuler commented. “As a result, we believe we have better outcomes by working with our communities, partners and volunteers to share ownership and find solutions to these challenges.”

Campground hosts are among the most common volunteers helping the BDNF. These hosts provide area information to visitors and perform light maintenance in the campgrounds.

Tom Wolfe, a dedicated volunteer, brought his experience and unique skills in 2017 to help with a number of cabin restoration projects in the Big Hole. He worked diligently to repair cabin doors and windows, replace rotted logs and timbers, paint floors, and oil cabin walls, roofs, and out buildings.

Each year the BDNF teams up with the Montana Conservation Corps (MCC), an organization that recruits Montana youth to help them learn while serving communities and public lands in Montana. The MCC works on a variety of projects including installation of trail signs, trail maintenance and bridge construction on trails throughout the BDNF. In 2017 the MCC worked on trails in the Deerhead Lake and the Lake Agnes areas in the Pioneer Mountains. They also spend quite a bit of time working on trails in the Anaconda-Pintler Wilderness and along the Continental Divide National Scenic Trail. This summer, the MCC will be working to clear and improve trails in old fire scarred areas in the Sand Basin area west of Philipsburg.

For over a dozen years another youth corps organization, AmeriCorps St. Louis, has returned to the forest to maintain trails, install bear-proof food-storage lockers, repair interpretive signs and fences, and cut firewood for rental cabins.

This year the Dillon Ranger District will be working with the Back Country Horsemen who will pack in supplies and equipment to Tent Lake in the Pioneer Mountains. The National Smokejumper Association will use the supplies and equipment to install a foot bridge and to improve trails in the area.

Several local clubs obtain grants that fund grooming of snowmobile trails and perform maintenance on OHV trails throughout the Beaverhead-Deerlodge National Forest.

These are just a few of the many volunteer and partner groups the BDNF works with. Other groups include: The Lewis and Clark Foundation; Montana Wilderness Association; Anaconda Job Corps; Flint Creek Trails Association; Echo Lake Trails Association; Beaverhead County Trails Coalition; Bitterroot Cross Country Ski Club; and many others.

For more information about opportunities to volunteer or partner with the Beaverhead-Deerlodge National Forest, contact Forest Service offices in Dillon, Butte, Ennis, Wisdom, or Philipsburg.

Carousel Corner

By Larry Hoffman

Raven Hrysenko, now a mining engineering student at Tech, helped me locate the horse pole pivot anchors in the floor of the carousel. These 30 pivots have to be directly below the centers of the crank arms that lift the ponies up and down. The work is tedious because a plumb bob on an 8-foot string has to be steadied twice under each crank shaft, then once under each crank arm, and all while the deck bobs and weaves with any body movement. Raven has been one of our steady volunteers this year.

We had to relocate some of our plumbing, doubting that the old routing would be secure from freezing. That work is almost finished and we should have workable restrooms next week. (How many times have I been optimistic

Bob Foley and Ted Bury have been showing up on Wednesdays, as well as Monday and Friday, often with one or two other electricians in tow, to get the wiring finished. They and Mike Sawicki have been plugging away on our project for more than two years, along with other members of our long-time core group. We are coming up in 23 years since the idea of a Carousel for Butte germinated. Other wiring is being done by electricians from Harrington Pepsi, who also have people installing the concession fixtures they helped us get.

Another tedious electrical chore that Ed Curran has been banging away on is the lights on the Carousel itself, some 2,000 of them, most of which are be-

Take Steps to Control Your Investment Taxes

Tax Season is finally over. Of course, how much you pay in taxes depends on a variety of factors, many of which you can't control. But you might give some thought to how you can manage your investment-related taxes.

Here are some suggestions to consider:

Contribute to your employer's retirement plan. If your employer offers a 401(k) or similar plan, such as a 403(b) or 457(b), contribute as much as you can afford. The more pre-tax dollars you put in to your retirement plan, the lower your taxable income. Your employer also may offer a Roth 401(k) option, under which you invest after-tax dollars, so your annual income won't be lowered and your withdrawals will be tax-free.

Contribute to an IRA. Even if you have a 401(k) or similar plan, you may still be eligible to contribute to an IRA. With a traditional IRA, your contributions may be fully or partially deductible, depending on your income level; with a Roth IRA, contributions are not deductible, but your earnings can grow tax-free, provided you've had your account at least five years and you don't start taking withdrawals until you're 59½.

Follow a "buy-and-hold" strategy. You can't control the price movements of your investments, but if you do achieve gains, you can decide when to take them – and this timing can make a substantial difference in your tax situation. If you sell investments that you've owned for one year or less and their value has increased, you may need to pay capital gains taxes at your personal income tax rate, which, in 2018, could be as high as 37 percent. But if you hold investments for more than one year before selling them, you'd be assessed the long-term capital gains rate, which is 0, 15 or 20 percent, or a combination of those rates.

Consider municipal bonds. If you're in one of the higher tax brackets, you may benefit from investing in municipal bonds. The interest on these bonds is typically free of federal taxes, and possibly even state and local taxes. Interest from some types of municipal bonds may be subject to the alternative minimum tax (AMT). However, because of the new tax laws, the AMT exemption amounts were increased significantly.

You might be wondering what these new laws mean to investors. In terms of your regular investment activities, the effect might not be that significant. The tax brackets for qualified dividends and capital gains – such as those realized when you sell stocks – will remain about the same. This means that most investors will continue to pay 15% to 20% on long-term capital gains and dividends. Consequently, the new tax laws shouldn't really affect you much in terms of your decisions on buying and selling stocks or investing in companies that may pay dividends. Of course, it's still a good idea to consult with your tax advisor on how the totality of the new laws will affect you.

Ultimately, your investment decisions shouldn't be driven only by tax implications – nonetheless, it doesn't hurt to take steps to become a tax-smart investor.

Benefits of Variety in Exercise

Our major health organizations have recommendations as to how much of what type of exercise is essential for healthy adults in our country to thrive. We previously discussed how to get started on exercise and how to choose the types of exercise that are right for you. Today we will talk about how much and how often the different exercises are recommended.

The Centers for Disease Control (CDC), the American Heart Association (AHA) and the American College of Sports Medicine (ACSM) all recommend a minimum of 150 minutes of moderate-intensity aerobic, or cardio, exercise each week. This is broken down to 30 to 60 minutes five days of the week. If vigorous-intensity exercise is performed, the sessions can be 20 to 60 minutes on three days of the week.

Aerobic activity gets you breathing harder and your heart beating faster. Some types of household activities can be aerobic, like mowing or raking the lawn, mopping and vacuuming, depending on the intensity with which they are performed. Other aerobic activities include brisk walking, biking, court sports, running, water aerobics, swimming and hiking. Aerobic exercises keep your cardiovascular system strong and healthy.

To get full benefit from aerobic activities, experts suggest they be performed for a minimum of ten minutes, and these shorter periods can be accumulated to be just as beneficial as longer exercise sessions. If these activities are done for less than ten-minute durations, they still contribute to the activity in your day and protect from the consequences of a sedentary lifestyle.

These three organizations also recommend two to three days per week of resistance exercise. As we've previously discussed in this column, strength training builds muscle and bone and is an important part of healthy living and healthy aging. To get maximum benefit from strength exercises, they should be done to the point that it is difficult to do another repetition.

Strength workouts can be done with free or machine weights, with resistance bands, body resistance, like push-ups and squats, or with heavy work like digging and shoveling. Yoga also builds strength. Weight exercises are performed for eight to twelve repetitions and for one to three sets, with greater benefits resulting from two to three sets. You can do strength on the same or different days as aerobic exercise, but it is important to have a whole day in between strength sessions to give muscles a chance to recover.

The ACSM also recommends two to three sessions per week of flexibility exercises. These can be after an aerobic workout of any kind, or after a short warm-up. Many group exercise classes include flexibility as the final portion of the class. Flexibility can be done at home as well, holding stretches from ten to thirty seconds and repeating till each stretch has been done for sixty seconds. Yoga class two to three times per week also works.

Lastly, neuromotor exercise, or functional fitness training, is also recommended two to three times per week. These exercises include those for agility, coordination and gait. Fortunately, both Yoga and Tai Chi both effectively cover this type of exercise and a class could be easier than doing these on your own.

If you are currently not exercising regularly, or at all, you will want to begin by selecting the category of exercise that most appeals to you. As previously discussed, walking is a good place to start. But if strength or stretching appeal to you more, consider joining a class and starting there. If you can get moving, or moving in more ways, you will not regret it!

What's Cooking

Rhubarb Mint Jelly
By Debbie Sorensen

Rhubarb season is just around the corner. Now that the ice snow and ice has finally receded from the garden area, the tell-tale signs of spring are beginning to emerge. Robins have shown up on the roof tops and flickers have been checking out the bird feeders. Crinkled dark green leaves with cranberry red stalks are pushing up through the winter covering of dead leaves heralding the presence of a new rhubarb crop. That is exciting and scary at the same time.

One cousin loves to use the first rhubarb stalks of the spring to make jelly. In her opinion, there is no comparison to the quality of the product that results. I think that is a good choice. In the past, I've picked rhubarb and had it stored in the refrigerator for "a spell". When I used it for jelly making purposes, I'm too embarrassed to tell you about the resulting mess.

If you enjoy serving lamb with mint jelly, the following rhubarb mint jelly recipe is a winner. The Cooperative Extension Service, University of Alaska Publication No. 64, has a wonderful collection of useful Rhubarb recipes. The following recipe comes from that publication.

Rhubarb Mint Jelly

Select and use only the green of the rhubarb stalks as the pink makes the jelly cloudy. Cut up and process in blender or food processor about 1 pound of rhubarb. Strain and squeeze the juice through a jelly bag, enough to make one cup of juice. (I've frozen chopped rhubarb and later, let it thaw in a container. I strain it through jelly bag and that works well also.)

Wash mint. Put in a large saucepan and crush to make 1 cup of mint leaves. Add 1 ½ c. water and bring to a boil. Boil for one minute. Remove from heat. Cover and let stand ten minutes.

Strain, combine and bring to a boil:

1 c. strained rhubarb juice

1 c. strained mint juice

½ tsp. green food coloring

Add 2 T. powdered pectin and boil ½ minute.

Add 3 c. sugar and bring to rapid boil. Remove from heat, skim if necessary and pour into prepared sterilized glass jars. Seal with hot lids. Process in boiling water bath for five minutes. Yield: approximately 3 cups jelly.

Thompson Park now open for summer

Thompson Park opened Monday, May 1 for the summer and fall. The 3,500-acre park, managed by the Forest Service and City-County of Butte-Silver Bow, is open daily from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. through Labor Day and then through October from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.

The Park has four day-use picnic areas: Nine Mile, Sagebrush Flats, Lower Eagles Nest and Lion's Den. Eagles Nest trailhead and Blacktail trailhead provide access to more than 25 miles of non-motorized trails. These trails offer hikers, mountain bikers, and horseback riders' connections to the Continental Divide National Scenic Trail and the Milwaukee Road Trail. Herman Gulch Trail provides a connection into the Highland Mountains area and other motorized trails.

Thompson Park also has a disc golf course in which members of the Mining City Disc Golf Club and an Eagle Scout candidate have been making improvements. The course is the only authorized disc golf course in the park and surrounding National Forest.

Visitors are reminded that shooting is prohibited within the park boundary, and fires are only allowed in the developed site fire grills.

For more information or to obtain a park brochure contact the Butte Ranger District at (406) 494-2147, or the Butte-Silver Bow Parks and Recreation Department at (406) 497-6571.

The Great Outdoors

A good book and thoughts from a master fishing rod builder

By Paul Vang

A few months ago we remembered the late Harry Selby, one of the last Professional Hunters from the tradition of multi-month African safari hunting trips. Not long after that, the publisher, Alfred A. Knopf, sent a review copy of a book about another great character of Africa, Dr. Ruth Spoerry, a French-born doctor who became famous as the flying Mama Daktari, or Mother Doctor. Over a period of 50 years, Dr. Spoerry became famous for flying all over rural Kenya, landing in remote villages and providing medical treatment. In Full Flight: A Story of Africa and Atonement, by John Heminway, tells the story of this amazing woman and of her accomplishments in bringing medicine to the African hinterlands. The book also tells of a shadowy past, going back to World War II, where, while still a medical student, she was part of the French resistance. The Nazi occupiers of France caught up with her and Spoerry eventually ended up in Ravensbrück, a concentration camp for women. While at the Ravensbrück camp, she fell under the influence of another woman who was a collaborator with the Nazis. She was assigned duties to provide medical care to fellow prisoners, but also got caught up in “mercy killings” of a sort. The woman with whom she worked was later convicted of war crimes and sentenced to death, though she cheated the hangman through suicide. Spoerry survived the war and returned to France to complete medical training, though she couldn’t escape the scandal of Ravensbrück. She eventually made her way to Lebanon, then Kenya, where she found her calling and future fame as the flying woman doctor. The author, John Heminway, is a British documentary filmmaker and author who got to know Spoerry in 1980 when he went to Kenya to write a magazine story about her. In numerous further meetings he thought he got to know her well, but it wasn’t until after her death, in 1999, that he began to learn of Spoerry’s earlier life and began researching her hidden past; research that included Spoerry’s own journals. The author, and note his name is Heminway, not to be confused with the Ernest Hemingway family, which also has Africa and Montana connections, has a distinguished background as an author, filmmaker and journalist. He now lives in Bozeman, Montana and has been an adjunct professor at the Montana State University film department, recognized for his achievements with an honorary doctorate. The book has gotten rave reviews from a variety of publications and reviewers, and it’s a pleasure to add my recommendation. Changing topics, at last week’s meeting of the George Grant Chapter of Trout Unlimited, Glenn Brackett, founder and owner of Sweetgrass Rods, now located in Butte, reflected on his life’s work, built around the building of bamboo flyrods. He became acquainted with people at the R. L. Winston company, in the San Francisco neighborhood where he grew up, then as an employee and an owner, and later with his partner, Tom Morgan, moving the company to Twin Bridges. Twelve years ago, Brackett and fellow worker Jerry Kustich left Winston to start Sweetgrass Rods. Brackett prefaced his remarks by saying, “I’ve got something like eight decades of memory to share with you, so I don’t know just where to start.” Growing up in the Bay Area, John Muir, one of the early advocates of wilderness, was a big influence. “We all have heroes,” he said, “mine was John Muir. He opened my consciousness to the wild world, and I’ve always tried to live with that.” Brackett is widely recognized as one of today’s master bamboo craftsmen, and he talked of his years of making a wide range of bamboo fishing rods, along with violin bows, wind chimes, canes, and other items. After a period when bamboo rods were in decline, there are now some 10,000 people making bamboo rods, some professional, some hobbyists. “I help a lot of them.” Working with bamboo is a challenging art, he says, and he concluded his remarks, saying, modestly, “After building thousands of rods, I’ve reached a point of competency of maybe 70 percent.” Paul Vang’s book, “Sweeter than Candy, A Hunter’s Journal” is available at Books & Books, Cavanaugh’s County Celtic, The Bookstore in Dillon, or online at <http://writingoutdoors.com>.

This Week In Labor History

“The class which has the power to rob upon a large scale has also the power to control the government and legalize their robbery”
-Eugene Debs, Legendary American Labor Leader, IWW co-founder, American Railroad Union founder

Wednesday, May 2:
Over 2,500 workers marched in Milwaukee for the 8-hour day. Demonstrators carry the worker’s red flag and the tricolor banners of the Eight Hour League. Governor Jeremiah Rusk supplied the Milwaukee National Guard with increased ammunition and the entire city police force with four companies of infantry and artillery. (“The worker’s flag is deepest red, It shrouded off our martyred dead; And ere their limbs grew stiff and cold, Their life-blood dyed its every fold.” -James O’Connell, song “The Red Flag”) -1886
Germany: Just months after Hitler was appointed Chancellor, as his very first move to insure his power, he took the decision to end democratic Unions in Nazi Germany. On May 2nd, 1933, police occupied all Unions headquarters, Union officials and Union leaders were arrested, many never to be seen again. The funds that belonged to the Unions were confiscated and all democratic worker’s Unions were outlawed. All Fascists throughout history, and even today, have one thing in common...they are anti-Union. -1933

Thursday, May 3
4 striking workers are killed, 200 wounded, when police protecting the capitalist interests, attack an 8-hour day demonstration on Chicago’s south side at the McCormick Harvesting Machine plant. The Haymarket Massacre is to take place the following day. -1886

Folk singer-songwriter, social justice activist, Union activist Pete Seeger is born. Seeger, a target during America’s shameful McCarthy (Red Scare) era said “One of the things I’m most proud of about my country is the fact that we did lick McCarthyism back in the fifties.” (Sadly McCarthyism is back. The MTGOP, Sen Daines, Right-Wing operatives, MTPR and the Billings Gazette shamelessly used McCarthyism and red baiting lies as part of a smear campaign during Montana’s 2014 Senate race.) -1919
Germany: Nazis officially change ‘German Worker’s Party’ to ‘National Socialist German Workers Party’, recuperating both “socialist” and “worker” into an all out Anti-Worker, anti-Union Corporate Ideology (Fascism). -1920

Friday, May 4:
Haymarket massacre: A day after police killed 4 striking workers and injured hundreds of others striking for the 8-hour day, protesters gathered at Haymarket Square in Chicago. As the peaceful event drew to a close, a bomb was thrown into the crowd killing one officer. Police responded by shooting into the crowd, killing 11 and wounding many. 8 workers were later framed and arrested even though most were not even present at the Haymarket rally and there was no evidence that linked any of them to the bombing. 4 were hanged, one committed suicide in jail and 3 were eventually pardoned by Illinois Gov. John Peter Altgeld. The Haymarket affair gave the pretext for a national witch hunt against labor and ended the quick rise of the Knights of Labor, a predecessor to the IWW. The Knights of Labor had been growing and rapidly attracting members. They professed Solidarity with all workers, regardless of race or ethnicity and championed the 8-hour work day. -1886

Gun-toting vigilantes attack peaceful striking Union miners and Union supporters in Harlan County, Kentucky. -1931

Saturday, May 5:
Strike by Utah and Northern railroad brakemen shuts down the Anaconda mine and smelter. -1886
Over 14,000 building trade Union workers and laborers, demanding an 8-hour work day, gather at the Milwaukee Iron Co. rolling mill in Bay View, Wisc. When the unarmed men approach the mill they are fired on by 250 National Guardsmen under orders from the governor to shoot to kill. 7 die, including 13-year-old boy for the sole purpose of protecting profits of the rich Capitalists. -1886
Lumber strike begins in Pacific Northwest, will involve 40,000 workers by the time victory is achieved after 13 weeks. Led by the CIO and IWA they won Union recognition, a 50 cent-per-hour minimum wage and an 8-hour day. -1937

Sunday, May 6:
Butte Montana: Butte Laborer’s Union strikes against wage reductions of surface workers; in honor of Butte’s first Union they change their name to Butte

Workingmen’s Union. -1890
400 black women working as tobacco stemmers walk off the job in a spontaneous revolt against poor working conditions and a $3 weekly wage at the Vaughan Co. in Richmond, Va. -1937

Monday, May 7:
The Knights of St. Crispin Union is formed in Milwaukee. It grew to 50,000 members before being crushed by organized employers later that year. -1867
2 are killed, 20 are injured in “Bloody Tuesday” as strikebreakers attempt to run San Francisco streetcars during a strike by Union operators. The strike was declared lost in 1908 after many more deaths in scab-operated streetcar accidents. -1907

Tuesday, May 8:
Founding of the American Federation of Teachers. -1916
Butte Montana: Butte Miners’ Union wins a closed shop in fourth longest strike, the first time since 1914. -1934
Philip Randolph and Milton P. Webster founded the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters. The Brotherhood was the very first African-American labor Union to sign a collective bargaining agreement with a major U.S. corporation. -1925
12,000 Steelworker-represented workers at Goodyear Tire & Rubber win an 18-day strike for improved wages and job security. -1997

The Black Donnellys Shelter Statistics

By popular demand, the Black Donnellys are returning to Butte to perform at a benefit for the Butte Rescue Mission.

The Black Donnellys Dublin are coming back to Butte next month and will perform on behalf of the Butte Rescue Mission. The duo Irish musicians' concert is part of their nation-wide Guinness World Record tour, and their Butte visit is the tour's only stop in Montana.

The concert will be at 2 p.m. on Tuesday, May 15, at the Butte Central Auditorium, Gale-na Street entrance. The concert time changed from the evening to the afternoon because of a scheduling conflict with the tour's goal of performing "60 gigs in 50 states in 40 days."

"Montana's a big state," Janice Downey of the Butte Rescue Mission said. "And with their only performance in Montana being in Butte, they have a lot of ground to cover in an RV before their next gig."

Titled "This Is My Home," the tour kicks off on May 11 from Las Vegas, where they perform nightly at the Mandalay Bay. With the tour's theme being immigration and the dislocation migrants feel, the last stop on the tour will be at Ellis Island in New York Harbor, where millions of immigrants landed in past centuries.

Butte's singer/guitarist Heather Lingle will open for The Black Donnellys.

Butte-Silver Bow's Chelsea Bailey Animal Shelter has released its shelter statistics for the month of March 2018.

In March, 36 dogs were picked up by Animal Control Officers, 5 were turned in by their owners and 5 were picked up and turned in by citizens. Thirteen dogs were adopted, 35 were reclaimed by their owners, 3 were sent to Rescue and one was euthanized.

Twelve cats were picked up by Animal Control Officers, 7 were turned in by their owners and 9 were picked up and turned in by citizens. Twenty six cats were adopted and 4 were reclaimed by their owners. No cats were sent to rescue or euthanized.

To contact the Animal Shelter, call 497-6528. To contact an Animal Control Officer, call 497-6527.
